

Course Types for Fall 2020

Asynchronous: something that can be viewed "on-demand". An example of this would be a recorded lecture, a YouTube video, or a Netflix movie.

Synchronous: Something that occurs at the same time or "live". An example of this would be a music concert, a class lecture delivered in-person or online at a specified date and time, or a scheduled TV show.

	 In-person courses (570)	 Blended learning courses (270)	 Online courses (650)
	A synchronous course, where all aspects of the course are delivered in person	A predominately online course, where most aspects of the course are delivered via OWL, however, some course content, could be offered either in-person or synchronously online	An asynchronous course, where all aspects of the course material, activities, and assignments are completed online via OWL. Optional synchronous elements may be offered
 Expected % of in-person instruction	100% of instruction is delivered in person (online pieces can be added)	0-100% of instruction is required in person *Even if campus is open, no instructor/student will be required on campus	0% of instruction is delivered in person
 Available Fall 2020	NO	YES	YES
 Timing of Delivery	Required* : synchronous Instructors may decide not to require attendance and/or explicit participation	Required : synchronous (i.e. students are required to keep timeslot reserved) Instructors may decide to not require participation/attendance for all synchronous components. This will be clearly articulated in the course outline	Required : asynchronous Optional : synchronous components *Students are not committed to a specific day and time, but instructors may offer participation in non-mandatory live components that are also recorded
 Reserved Classroom	YES	YES Instructors and/or students who have preference to be in-class may have this option if restrictions lifted	NO
 Exams (King's)	In person	Online (asynchronous or synchronous)	Online (asynchronous or synchronous)
 Office Hours	Office hours take place in person and on campus	Office hours take place online	Office hours take place online

*Some rules for 650- & 270-coded courses are modified from typical interpretation to adjust for COVID circumstances in Fall '20. May be extended later to Winter '21 semester.