

DOROTHY DAY

The World
Will Be Saved By Beauty

An INTIMATE PORTRAIT of
MY GRANDMOTHER

KATE HENNESSY

Kate Hennessy is a writer and the youngest of Dorothy Day's nine grandchildren. She attended New York University and the School for International Living in Vermont. She has traveled and worked around the world, including at an international summer camp in the former USSR; as an ESL Teacher in Guatemala and to Tibetan refugees in India; as well as a curator at a small Vermont museum. She has also walked 750 kilometers on el Camino de Santiago in Spain. After living most of her life in Vermont, New York City and Ireland, Kate now lives in Oakland, California.

"Devastatingly beautiful ... [Hennessy] explores the depths of Day's humanity, in all its frailty and shortcomings."

—The Chicago Tribune

"[I]ntensely interesting ... the images are kaleidoscopic."

—The Atlantic

"[A]n intimate, revealing and sometimes wrenching family memoir."

—The New York Times

"Kate Hennessy's Dorothy Day lives in my heart, my mind, and my soul." —Martin Sheen, actor and activist
