

King's and St. Peter's Seminary Faculty Book Launch

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE – January 23, 2014

London, ON – Fifteen scholarly monographs by King's faculty and St. Peter's Seminary faculty will be celebrated during a reception at King's on Friday January 24, 2014 beginning at 3:30p.m. in Bessie Labatt Hall, 266 Epworth Ave, London.

Ranging from an examination of consumer culture during World War II to grief counseling, poetry, Shakespeare, global development and more, these recently-published books demonstrate the vitality and breadth of research currently underway at King's and St. Peter's.

"Faculty scholarship is alive and well at King's and we are delighted to recognize and celebrate our colleagues who have recently published books. The accomplishment of these scholars is integral to our established and growing reputation as a first class academic institution," says Dr. David Sylvester, King's Principal.

"Scholarly monographs reflect the wisdom of our time; engage the community, present and future, in conversation and become part of our collective legacy of achievement and discourse," adds Dr. Sauro Camiletti, King's Academic Dean.

The books come from a wide variety of departments at King's including History, Interdisciplinary Studies, Modern Languages, Political Science, Philosophy & Religious Studies and Psychology. From St. Peter's come books on Archbishop John Walsh and the writings of the Carmelites on the trauma of sexual abuse.
