

GIVE YOUR DEGREE GLOBAL APPEAL: Western's Global and Intercultural Engagement Honor

Western International's new certificate program recognizes students' global and intercultural experience in both academic and extracurricular activities at Western, in the community, elsewhere in Canada, or in another country. Students accumulate points and attend an intercultural workshop. Once completed, the Honor will appear on your Official Academic Record and complement your Western degree with an added intercultural and global element.

Benefits

- Complement your degree with recognition for your global experience
- Develop the intercultural skills and global awareness employers are looking for
- Gain a new perspective on the world
- Acquire important professional experience through the experiential learning component

How?

100 points of experience and then participation in a workshop are required to be awarded the Honor.

You can earn points in four different ways:

- Take courses with an international or intercultural focus from an approved list
- Complete an internationally or interculturally focused volunteer or internship placement either at home or abroad
- Study a foreign language, or earn points for pre-existing foreign language skills
- Study, work or complete research abroad during your Western degree

And then:

- Attend the workshop in Global and Intercultural Competency through Western International

Did you know?

- You do not need to leave the country to be awarded the Honor.
- You do not need foreign language skills to be awarded the Honor.
- There is no registration deadline. You can submit your Honor claim up until the end of your final term.
- A dynamic point system offers flexibility in how you earn the Honor.
- As an international student, you can claim English proficiency if it is your second language, as well as your time studying in Canada.

The world awaits!
