God of the inner light,
come to us
on the golden rays of the morning,
arming moods that are frosty,
enlightening minds that are gloomy;
and, as the sun swings higher,
so may our lives rise to you in the active praise of this day’s duties:
through Jesus, our risen Light.

Marie de l'Incarnacion (April 30)

Born Marie Guyart in Tours, France, on October 28, 1599, she was the first superior of the Ursulines of Quebec. The road to her vocation was not straightforward. Marie’s father was by birth a bourgeois; her mother was connected with the illustrious house of Barbon de la Bourdaisière. Despite this, Marie gave evidence of great piety and detachment from the world very early on. At the age of seventeen, in obedience to her parents, she was married to a silk manufacturer named Claude Martin, and devoted herself completely to the duties of a Christian wife. The union was a source of trials: the only consolation it brought her was the birth of a son. Six months after her son was born, she was left a widow. Finding herself once again unmarried, Marie entertained the idea of joining the Ursulines. However, being the mother of a young child forced her to delay this project until her son was twelve years old. Two years after her entry into the convent she was made novice mistress.

On April 3, 1639, Sister Marie of the Incarnation sailed from Dieppe with a few sisters who had begged to be allowed to accompany her. After a perilous three month voyage they arrived at Quebec and were joyfully welcomed by the settlers. Sister Marie and her companions, who by now acknowledged her as the superior of their small community, occupied a little house in the lower town (Basse-Ville). On December 29, 1650, a terrible fire left the Ursuline monastery in ashes. At first she took shelter with the Hospitalières and then with Mme de la Peltrie. By May 29 of the following year she inaugurated the new monastery. She spent the rest of her life teaching and catechizing the young natives and died April 30, 1672 after forty years of labours, thirty-three of them spent in Canada.

Marie of the Incarnation has left a few works which reveal her piety, and resignation to Divine Providence. “Des Lettres” (Paris, 1677-1681) contains an account of the events which took place in Canada during her time, and constitute one of the sources for the history of the French colony from 1639 to 1671. There are also a “Retraite”, with a short exposition of the Canticle of Canticles, and a familiar “Explication” of the mysteries of the Faith — a catechism which she compiled for young religious women.

On April 3, 2014, Pope Francis signed a decree recognizing Marie de l'Incarnacion as a saint and inserting her name into the list of saints. The process is known as an “equivalent canonization”.
