When we realize that the road we have been following may not be the one that is best for us, we must have the humility to admit that we have strayed, that we have been mistaken, that God knows better than we the life that will lead us to him. Nothing is more difficult than admitting that we have failed, that we have sinned. We feel haunted by the past. No matter how willing we are to do penance and suffer and take on the heavy burden of our guilt, in the end the greatest humility is accepting the role the Lord has written for us.

All that the Lord asks is that we come home. We must accept our roles as daughters and sons and not refuse this great gift of love. We are all children of the Father, we have all sinned, but we are all welcome in our Father’s house. We must live as a forgiving and as a forgiven people.

Dr. Benjamin Muller
Walls, Security, and the Sacred
THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 2019, 7:30 PM, KENNY THEATRE
FREE / ACCESSIBLE

After spending nearly two decades examining borders from the perspective of critical security studies, Dr. Muller reflects on the relationship between security and the sacred in the contemporary vision of borders, which is an all too often ill-fated celebration of walls. What of the many barriers and fences referred to as “peace walls?” How might these developments have something to say about our contemporary ideas about security, safety, community, and the sacred?

Dr. Benjamin Muller holds a Ph.D. in International Studies from Queen’s University, Belfast (2005). He is the author of multiple peer-reviewed books, articles, and chapters, on issues related to borders, sovereignty, technology, and identity. Dr. Muller has served as an invited expert to NATO, INTERPOL, the World Customs Organization, the European Science Foundation, and the Parliament of Canada. He has served on boards and as president of various academic and professional associations, has held visiting fellowships at a number of Universities in Canada, the US, and Turkey, and continues to serve as President of the King’s University College Faculty Association (2015-2019).
