Christ is the supreme proof of God’s love for humanity not just in the objective sense, in the manner of an inanimate pledge given to someone of one’s own love; it is also so in the subjective sense. In other words, it is not just the proof of the love of God, but it is also the love itself of God which has assumed a human form in order to be able to love and be loved from within our situation. In the beginning was love and “love was made flesh”... St Paul coins a special expression for this new modality of God’s love, calling it “the love of God made visible in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Romans 8:39).
